Highways Yellow Lines Maltongate

After experiencing first-hand the frustrations of the traffic warden last week, I have asked for an update on the yellow lines by the shops on Maltongate. It appears there was to be some road resurfacing here, so the renewal of lines was put on hold until after completion of this work. I am now told that due to cut backs, the resurfacing has been put on hold. After several email exchanges, Area 4 has acknowledged the problem of lines not matching signage. I have requested an update for this meeting.

When I interviewed the traffic warden handing out tickets, she explained that though the double yellow lines could not be enforced south of the bollards, the ones to the north (near shops) could be enforced as they were considered to be blocking the site line at a junction.

Pelican Crossing

Please continue to report incidents, there should be a piece in the Mercury next week which will hopefully encourage more people to report problems experienced. If you have your phone on you and are able to do so safely, a picture would be a great help – I have taken several myself but I acknowledge it is difficult to take one with all the elements of the problem in place.
